ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Martin Scorsese’s The Irishman tells the true story of mob hitman and World War II veteran Frank “The Irishman” Sheeran. The film follows Sheeran in his later years of life as he reflects on the events that defined his career as a notorious hitman, particularly the role he played in the disappearance of labor leader and his longtime friend Jimmy Hoffa. The film also looks back at Sheeran’s involvement with the Bufalino crime family.

Bufalino had introduced Sheeran to Teamsters International President Jimmy Hoffa. Hoffa, who became a close friend, allegedly used Sheeran for muscle, including the assassination of recalcitrant union members and members of rival unions threatening the Teamsters’ turf. According to Sheeran, the first conversation he had with Hoffa was over the phone, where Hoffa started by saying, “I heard you paint houses” — a mob code meaning: I heard you kill people, the “paint” being the blood that splatters when bullets are fired into a body. Sheeran later became acting president of Local 326 of the Teamsters Union in Wilmington, Delaware.

In 1972, Sheeran had been charged for murder in the 1967 death of Robert DeGeorge, who was killed in a shootout in front of Local 107 headquarters, however, the case was dismissed on the grounds that Sheeran had been denied a speedy trial. He was also alleged to have conspired to murder Francis J. Marino in 1976, a Philadelphia labor organizer, and Frederick John Gawronski, killed the same year in a tavern in New Castle, Delaware. The Irishman is based on homicide investigator, prosecutor and eventually, Chief Deputy Attorney General of the State of Delaware, Charles Brandt’s 2004 book I Heard You Paint Houses.

This seminar will describe the background of the principals in the movie, the reasons and occasion for Delaware’s participation in the conviction of the Irishman, the decisions, experiences and occurrences that led up to and followed the trial of Frank Sheeran by the then Attorney General and prosecuting Deputy Attorney General of the State of Delaware in State v. Sheeran.
